Chac Mool is a statue of the Aztec god of water, and in the story, the protagonist, Filiberto, discovers a chac mool that is slowly becoming flesh. The story explores themes of obsession, the power of art, and the blurring of reality and fantasy.

Filiberto, a collector of native Mexican art, purchases a chac mool statue. As the story progresses, it becomes clear that the sculpture is not just a piece of art, but a living entity, with power over its creator. Filiberto becomes increasingly fixated on the statue, leading to his eventual death.

The story is a commentary on the relationship between art and life, and the power of imagination. It raises questions about the nature of reality, and the界限 between what is real and what is imagined.

Carlos Fuentes, the author of the story, is known for his use of fantastico (fantastico) in his works, creating imaginative and surreal settings. In 'Chac Mool', he delves into the idea of art having a life of its own, challenging traditional notions of reality.

The story is a reflection on the impact of art on human life, and how it can take on a life of its own, leading to unforeseen consequences. It is a powerful exploration of the power of imagination and the potential of art to transcend ordinary reality.
